I'm an electrical and computer engineering student — more or less — at UCF. Although I have completed all course requirements, I cannot graduate until the end of Fall 2011. Long story.

While I wait, I'm working on some open-source projects, as well as taking a few freelance gigs to get by. At the time of writing, I have a number of aaaaaalmost-finished projects that keep getting superseded before being released. This should change soon. When it does, I'll write about them here.

Careerwise, I was an Apple intern in 2009 (iPod media playback).

I am remarkably fond of footnotes¹.

The site itself is static HTML. You can check out the entire site, including the rendering scripts, from the root URL using Mercurial:

```
hg clone http://strobe.cc/ strobe
```

There's a good story behind why the site has both code and data in the same repository. Who knows, I might write it down some day.

¹If you're viewing them on the site, they should really be margin notes.
